

Satellite radio, and specifically XM radio satellite service has been the single best technology invention in my 36 years. While I can appreciate the arguments about competition and taking over the roles and markets of local broadcast stations, there are people who do not care for broadcast programming, and therefore are not exposed to the regular traffic and weather broadcast listeners get. I also feel it's my choice, by paying for the equipment and service, to get weather and traffic when I want it, and when I need it, or when I'd rather listen to music, uninterrupted. I feel that this is a situation very similar to broadcast television and cable/satellite television, and XM should be allowed to operate in the best interest of its customers who choose to be able to receive quality programming and service whenever, and wherever they are.
